F BLIX MATTINEZ is dead. His a afternoon at his modest home on Dunne boulevard in Tobin Place, surrounded by his family and with a smile

Since Sunday his illness had been oneldered serious and his friends and family were much worrled regarding his condition. With the same keenness of intellect which he showed in all things, no one realized this mooner than did Mr. Martines himself.

When James Graham McNary, one of When James Granam scasary, one of his closest friends, went to see him Sunday afternoon, Mr. Martinez said; "Jim, I want you to be my administra-for and executor," "Mr. Martinez, you are not going to need an administrator and executor," Mr. McNary said. "You will be a well wan soon."

Afreld of Pacamonia,

I don't know. I have always been arraid of pacumonia and I understand that I have a severe attack of it." Mr. Martinez replied. "It may be my time to go, if it is, then it is all right; If hot, it will do no harm to get ready. Monday afternoon Mr. Martinez made certain changes in his will.

Mr. Martinez continued to grow worse and although the attending physicians did everything possible to tide him over his crisis, his heart failed to

For Country and Community.

Wednesday morning Mr. Martines said to his family: "My spirit will pass out about six ocloca this evening."

Later in the day be said: "I rannot die new. I however much to do for my country and for my community."

He was conscious and self possessed until within a few moments of his death recognized those about him, and conversed about final details of his affairs. He realized that death was near, and prepared for the end without a protest or a struggle.

Funeral Priday.

PLAG PLACED AT HALP MAST "In the death of Felix Martinez the city of El Paso suffers a distinct loss," said mayor Tom Lea Thursday morning. "Such men as he are a rarity, and El Paso, as well as the state, can ill afford to lose such a type of cluzen. His prominence nationally is but a small evidence of his worth as a citizen. It Paso was his dream, of which be never thred talking. His was a wonderful foresight. "Inknown to many, he was of a most charitable nature, and the good which he did was always done in a quiet and unastentations manner. The maddened hearts and tearstained eyes that will follow his body to its last resting place will be the highest tribute that can be paid to Felix Martinez. "The flag at half mast on the city hall its but a small evidence of the grief and sense of loss the city of El Paso feels in his death. The city hall will be closed at 3 celock Friday afternoon in respect to his memory."

J. M. Lujan was First County Clerk; Interpreter For Juarez.
